WOMAN'S WORLD.

MAKING TEA BY ELECTRICITY IN LON-

This Winter's Girl-The Woman Bachelor. A Woman's First Duty - Ambitious of Aquatic Fame-The Queen of Korea. Mourning Fashions In Europe.

A firm of London silversmiths has produced an electric teakettle which is said to have considerable vogue in London drawing rooms.

The primary and very appreciable attraction of the electric kettle is its absolute cleanliness. There are of course no fumes of any kind from the electric light which is used to produce the heat, and therefore the process of using the kettle is absolutely cleanly. Nor is the simplicity of the new kettle and its method of use any less admirable than its perfect cleanliness. It is only necessary to attach the cord in which the electric wires are inclosed to any connection which may be fitted up in a room for lighting purposes, and the apparatus is in working order in a mo-

The kettle, which is a very shapely and agreeable production, is made in such a way that when it is filled with water and placed upon the stand in which is the electric lamp it can be tilted up and the water poured from it without the necessity of removing it from the stand, and by this means the risk of scalding the hands or of spilling the water is avoided. The lamps with which these kettles are fitted are of varying powers, ranging from 8 to 50 candle power, the most useful size, which is generally recommended for ordinary purposes, being of 16 candle power. This size is very serviceable and economical in usage and capable of affording all the heat which is required under ordinary circumstances. A lamp of this strength is amply sufficient to keep boiling water hot as long as may be necessary, while one of 50 candle power will boil a pint of quite cold water in 12 minutes, while to go to the other extreme one of even eight candle power will suffice to keep water hot.

This Winter's Girl. She will smile wearily where once she was wont to laugh loudly. She will raise her eyebrows languidly to denote interest. She will bow with such chilling hauteur that her best friends will misunderstand her. She will bestow no caresses. Where she has been accustomed to kiss enthusiastically she will extend her finger tips. She will bend oreasionally over her mother and leave a light, chilly kiss somewhere in the region of the brow or hair, but that will be the wildest outburst of affection she will allow herself, for the young woman of the coming winter intends to have the "repose which stamps the caste of Vere de Vere" for her most remarkable P. H. Boyer characteristic.

It is a natural reaction. She has been actively interested in one thing and another for so long a time that the role has begun to pall upon her. She will do no more charity work. Her mad enthusiasm for the poor has abated and has run its course. Even if it had not she would be obliged to let it appear to be the case this winter. She will not listen with parted lips and tear filled eyes to tales of poverty and woe.

Good fellowship and camaraderie are among the things which she will sacrifice. She has determined to be a remote, goddesslike being, and no man can assume an air of brotherliness or even of cordial, self assured liking with a goddess. She will not be a frank, jolly companion to him. She will smile distantly at his stories. She may suppress a slight yawn at his anecdotes. At any rate, she will not listen to them with shining eyes and eager air. She will convey the impression of having heard most of them before or of being so intimately acquainted with most of the phases of life she hears described that she is no longer even mildly interested

Her dear friends will suffer from the same half world worn, half icy treatment She will not press their hands or smooth their hair or unburden her soul to them. She will not invite their confidences, and she will not assume an interest in their affairs. She will be rude, of course. But that will count for very little. She will be the fashion.-Chicago Herald.

HOLLAND MAD.

The Enterprising and Honest Dutch Have

The town has suddenly gone Holland mad, not as that thrifty little kingdom did when it lost its heart over tulips and threatened to bring the finances of the country to ruin, but wisely, discreetly mad, as New Yorkers be The china shops are filled with Delft, the silversmith's cases with Dutch silver and the very milliners display little Dutch bonnets, fashioned like the quaint peaked caps worn by the good dames of old Amsterdam. Even Dutch furniture has become a craze, and fashionable shoppers are passing by the gorgeous empire styles, decorated with the laurel leaf, to buy the Dutch sofas and cabinets, curiously inlaid with rare woods and wrought with picturesque

In far better taste is this Dutch furniture, fashioned, as it is, by hand to meet the domestic needs of a sincere, honest folk, than the empire furniture, with its bizarre ornamentations of gild-ed metal and its mock classic patterns, designed to suit a newly created aristocracy. If we could but bring back the simple domestic spirit of the Dutch with our Dutch fashions, it would settle many a social problem, but Dutch fashio as they now appear are as costly -: the gilded fashions of Louis XV or the empire. It has long been an established fact that one must pay most extravagantly for refined simplicity, so that Delft is often almost as costly as Dres-There are pretty fruit baskets in Delft, "drug vases," low bedtime can-dlesticks, shoes and the most altogether delightful tiles imaginable, duplicating in pattern old tiles, some of which still exist in manor houses in old New York and near Albany. It is now possible to get almost all the new shapes in this modern Delft, as it is a wise European custom to save all designs used in the china factory. - New York Tribuna
